Performing Self-Audits

COVID-19 has been a major disruption to performing property risk control and underwriting surveys. At Aon, we can provide our clients with the ability to perform basic self-audits, under the direction of our professional risk consultants.

Mobile Forms

Aon works with strategic vendors to offer a suite of mobile forms. We have been instrumental in mobile form innovations in pre- and post-loss situations.

Features of mobile forms include:

- Prescriptive content using dropdowns, multiple choice, text fields, and more
- Modules that follow the survey process, allowing the user to concentrate on a single aspect of the survey, or the entire survey
- Ability to take photographs in all modules, for any of the fields desired
- Automatic report generation
- Expedient exchange of information – concise details with speed – improving the communication of risk improvement opportunities

While operating under the restrictions of social distancing, we see mobile forms as a solution to allow clients to continue to “own their data” by gathering information for:

- Basic COPE data
- Natural Catastrophe Modeling Primary and Secondary Characteristics
- Client requested specific data
- Damage Assessment information
- Idle Facilities checklists.

The basic self-audits process involves the following steps:

- Determining specific need
- Choosing form fields (content)
- Taking client training webinars
- Using telephonic consultations and support
- Reviewing reports
